ADDITIONAL ARCHITECTURAL AND STRUCTURAL DESCRIPTION:

The Clark House is a Federal/Greek Revival style house. The center entry has a 6-panelled door with sidelights extending its entire height, and wide panels supporting a partial entablature. Windows are six-over-six with projecting caps and (aluminum) shutters. The medium-pitched roof is topped by a massive central chimney, and the eaves treatment consists of a boxed cornice with a wide frieze and gable-end returns. The main block has aluminum siding, and rests on a stone foundation.

A 1-story, gable-roofed ell has the same siding, windows, and foundation as the main block. It has a 6-panelled door with three transom lights.

RELATED STRUCTURES AND CONTEXT: A separate 1-story, gable-roofed shed has clapboard with board-and-batten siding, fixed one and six-light windows, a new multi-panelled and lit door, and a brick foundation. It has been converted for use as an apartment.

BOUNDARY AND ACREAGE DESCRIPTION: 1.7 acres bounded to the N-Kalmin, S-Costa, E-Old Mill Road, W-Kalmin.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Evaluation & Historical Associations):

The Bartlett House is an example of the perpetuation of a traditional house plan (Georgian) updated to reflect popular ornamentation of the period (Greek Revival doorway). In conjunction with the Peaslee Tavern (Site 37) this house makes an important contribution to the historic streetscape of Old Mill Road.

Map Data: 1856: F. Bartlett
1892: J.H. Bartlett

J.M. Bartless owned this house and the tavern next door.
